FORKLIFT DRIVER SAFETY TRAINING

OSHA requires all forklift drivers to receive safety training every three years

To help our customers stay in compliance, we offer forklift safety training classes every month in Northern and Central California.

WHAT YOU'LL LEARN

The class opens with a review of OSHA regulations as they pertain to forklift operation. Attendees are also shown the different types of injuries that occur: overturned forklifts, workers struck or pinned by a forklift, etc.

Then an Operational Safety video is shown, to educate attendees on:

- Proper inspection of batteries, dock boards, trailer floors and load stability
- Correct fuel handling and storage
- Safe battery charging
- Safe methods of load handling and capacities
- Proper forklift parking and securing when not in use
- The need for a Daily/Shift Operation check sheet, with details on safety & operational checks which must be performed before operating the unit.

After the video, attendees will complete a 74-question Written Response Workbook as a group. Once the workbook is complete, all attendees go into our shop and do a Daily/Shift Inspection using it as a guide.

After the inspection is done, attendees return to the classroom for a 10-question graded test. Those who pass are issued a Forklift Operator Certification card. If you do not pass, you must re-take the course.

Not your first training? State law requires a re-certification every 3 years. We're happy to welcome you back.

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

If you're ready to sign up or get re-certified, you must register for the class in advance. To register in Northern California, contact Joy Virnig at (510) 534-6566. To register in Central California, contact Irene Torrez at (559) 994-7997.

Visit our safety training page for the next available training dates:
